Trading robot on the indicators Moving Average and RSI

Like other trading robots, this robot is based on the methods of technical analysis. As is clear from the name itself, the display is carried out according to the Moving Average and RSI. This is one of the most obvious assistants, absolutely indispensable for intraday trading. Such models, with some author's modifications are used by very many professional traders.

A trader using this robot can automatically follow the position, avoiding the stop loss, but approaching it as close as possible. The program is based on generally accepted indicators and methods of technical analysis.
